After a slow start, the U.S. economy expanded at an ever-increasing pace during the twelve-month fiscal period ended January 31, 2012. Companies registered robust profits and began to hire workers in increasing numbers, pushing the unemployment rate down to its lowest level in three years. The recovery was held back in part by political dysfunction in Washington and a variety of geopolitical worries, which at times sparked extraordinary market volatility.

Twelve Months in Review through January 31, 2012

Hans W. Kertess Chairman

For the twelve-month fiscal period ended January 31, 2012:

- NFJ Dividend, Interest & Premium Strategy Fund rose 4.30% on net asset value (NAV) and 9.07 % on market price.
- AGIC Equity & Convertible Income Fund increased 0.87% on NAV and declined 4.85 % on market price.

Brian S. Shlissel
President & CEO

The Russell 3000 Index, a broad measure of U.S. stock market performance, was up 3.86% during the twelve-month period. The Russell 1000 Value Index, a measure of large-cap value-style stocks, rose 1.88% and the Russell 1000 Growth Index, a measure of growth style stocks, advanced 6.07% during the reporting period. Convertible securities, as reflected by the Bank of America Merrill Lynch All Convertibles Index, declined 1.80%.

As the fiscal year unfolded, U.S. gross domestic product (GDP), the value of goods and services produced in the country, the broadest measure of economic activity and the principal indicator of economic performance, grew at an annualized rate of just 0.4%. The January to March 2011 period was marked by turmoil across much of the Middle East, and by an earthquake, tsunami and nuclear meltdown in Japan. Middle East unrest pushed oil prices higher, while Japan s catastrophe hampered a significant portion of the global supply chain. GDP accelerated from that point, growing at annualized rates of 1.3% between April and June 2011, 1.8% between July and September 2011 and 2.8% (preliminary estimate) between October and December 2011. The labor market also accelerated, as the U.S. unemployment rate dropped from 9.1% to 8.3% during the twelve-month reporting period. The jobless rate s reduction all occurred during the last five months of the fiscal year, a sign, perhaps, of just how quickly the economy is gathering momentum. The government indicated that private sector job creation in 2011 was the best since 2005.

The economic expansion meant continued strong operating results for U.S. corporations. The Commerce Department reported profits were approximately $1.97 trillion (seasonally adjusted at annualized rates) between July and September 2011. Corporate strength was reflected in Federal Reserve (the Fed) data indicating non-financial companies holding in excess of $2 trillion in cash and other liquid assets. Relative to total corporate assets, this was the highest level since 1963. Strong balance sheets, in turn, have triggered rising dividend payments by many companies. A recent report by Standard and Poor s forecasts that dividend payouts by S&P 500 firms would surpass the record $247.9 billion set in 2008.

The Road Ahead

Despite the improving U.S. economy, actions taken by the Fed during the twelve-month period signify caution. The Fed extended its policy of maintaining low interest rates—at least through late 2014 and began another effort to stimulate the economy by swapping $400 billion in short-term Treasury securities Receive this report electronically and in exchange for a similar amount of longer-term bonds. The lower long-term yields, the Fed intimated, could help breathe life into the housing market. January 31, 2012 (unaudited)

For the 12 months ended January 31, 2012, NFJ Dividend, Interest & Premium Strategy Fund (the Fund) returned 4.30% on net asset value and 9.07% on market price.

The U.S. stock market experienced periods of heightened volatility during the fiscal period. Despite several economic headwinds, geopolitical events, the devastating earthquake in Japan and the European sovereign debt crisis, the market posted a solid gain over the first three months of the period. During this time, investors generally focused on corporate profits that largely exceeded expectations. The market then fell sharply over the next five months, as investor risk appetite was often replaced with heightened risk aversion. The change in investor sentiment was triggered by a number of factors, including fears of a double-dip recession, Standard & Poor s downgrade of U.S. government securities and increased concerns of contagion from the escalating European sovereign debt crisis. However, the market then rallied over the last four months of the period. Improving economic data in the U.S. and hopes for a resolution to the European sovereign debt crisis bolstered investor sentiment and propelled the overall market higher. All told, the Russell 1000 Value Index returned 1.88% during the 12 months ended January 31, 2012.

Convertible Market Summary

Investor sentiment varied considerably throughout the reporting period. Significant macro events early in the period, including disaster in Japan, increasing oil prices due to the Middle East / North Africa turbulence and European sovereign debt woes, were notable headlines, but ultimately had no substantial impact on the convertibles market as a whole.

However, mid-period performance was the worst since the 2008 financial crisis. Political headlines and related macroeconomic uncertainty influenced markets. The sell-off in equity markets was driven by fears of a double dip recession in the U.S, S&P s U.S. credit rating downgrade and the potential for a Greek default. For the convertibles market in particular, every macro factor seemed to be inexorably important, and broadly discouraged any buying. Convertibles were readily available for sale regardless of solid second quarter earnings. Additionally, a decline in bond floor valuations had a negative impact on the convertibles market, while the lack of liquidity from the major banks and brokers exacerbated the decline.

Performance over the remaining months of the reporting period reversed and rebounded nicely into January month-end as U.S. recession fears waned and concerns around Europe sovereign debt crisis eased. Corporate bond spreads tightened as prices rose. Bond prices rose to more accurately reflect the lack of balance sheet risk for the average issuer in the market. Besides a positive equity market, an increase in bond floor valuations had a positive impact on the convertibles market.
Based on these observations, it wasn t surprising that industry level performance was mixed for the period. Within the convertible universe, economically sensitive issuers, such as Transportation, Materials, Consumer Discretionary and Energy, underperformed for the period, while counter-cyclical sectors including Utilities, Health Care and Telecommunications issuers outperformed.
Levels of implied volatility, as measured by the Chicago Board Options Exchange Volatility Index (VIX), were relatively low for the first half of the reporting period, trading mostly in the teens and averaging at a level of 18.3. Increased levels of volatility were seen in March when the VIX peaked just below 30 after an earthquake hit Japan, leading to a nuclear crisis at the Fukushima Daiichi power plant. The VIX fell back to previous levels at the end of March, only to rise to 48 in August when sovereign debt issues in Europe worsened. Elevated levels of volatility continued through November, with the VIX averaging just above 30 for the second half of the period. The average volatility throughout the entire period was 24.4.

The equity portion of the portfolio advanced, as both stock selection and sector allocation contributed positively to results. In terms of stock selection, the Fund s holdings in the Financials, Materials and Consumer Staples sectors were the most beneficial. This was somewhat offset by stock selection in the Industrials, Telecommunication Services and Energy sectors.

From a sector allocation perspective, an underweight to Financials and overweights to Consumer Staples and Materials contributed the most to the Fund s performance. Conversely, an underweight to Utilities, an overweight to Information Technology and an underweight to Consumer Discretionary detracted the most from results.

During the 12-month reporting period, the equity portion of the portfolio s largest overweights relative to the Russell 1000 Value Index were in the Energy, Information Technology and Materials sectors. Conversely, the largest relative underweights were in the Financials, Consumer Discretionary and utilities sectors.

The Fund s convertible positions in Health Care, Utilities, Technology and Consumer Staples rose by the greatest magnitude during the reporting period. Less volatile, defensive sectors benefited the most when the market abruptly rotated into counter-cyclical stocks as economic slowdown concerns weighed on investor sentiment. Additionally, drug manufacturing companies increased in value due to better-than-expected quarterly profits. Select technology companies rose on M&A activity as well as data points suggesting continued strong end market demand.

The Fund s weakest convertible performers were concentrated in cyclical sectors including Materials, Transportation, Industrials and Energy. Materials companies were off on fears that the weaker global economic outlook and higher input costs would impact future earnings. In general, Transportation companies underperformed due to economic slowdown concerns. Energy issuers were lower as weak macro data drove down energy prices and reduced investors confidence in future earnings.

For the 12 months ended January 31, 2012, AGIC Equity & Convertible Income Fund returned 0.87% on net asset value and -4.85% on market price.
Although market sentiment varied significantly throughout the reporting period, the net result for the equity and convertible markets combined was a positive. Significant macro events early in the period, including disaster in Japan, increasing oil prices due to the Middle East / North Africa turbulence and European sovereign debt woes, were notable headlines, but ultimately had no substantial impact on the markets as a whole.
However, mid-period performance was the worst since the 2008 financial crisis. Political headlines and related macroeconomic uncertainty influenced markets. Equities and convertibles were readily available for sale regardless of solid second quarter earnings. Additionally, a decline in bond floor valuations had a negative impact on the convertible market, while the lack of liquidity from the major banks and brokers exacerbated the decline.

into August corresponding to the fears of European sovereign debt issues and weak U.S. economic stats. The index peaked at 48.0 on August 8th and set the new high mark for the fiscal year. The VIX declined over the remaining months of the reporting period and ended January 2012 very close to where it started in February 2011.

Portfolio specifics

The Fund s equity positions in Health Care, Telecommunications and Consumer Staples rose by the greatest magnitude during the reporting period. Defensive sectors benefited the most when the market abruptly rotated into counter-cyclical stocks as economic slowdown concerns weighed on investor sentiment. Additionally, drug manufacturing companies were higher due to better-than-expected quarterly profits. The Telecommunications sector represented consistent operating certainty in a period of great uncertainty.

The Fund s weakest equity performers were in most economically sensitive holdings, including Energy, Materials and Financials. Energy issuers were lower as weak macro data drove down energy prices and reduced investors confidence in future earnings. Materials companies were off on fears that the weaker global economic outlook and higher input costs would impact future earnings. Financials were pressured by regulatory concerns and overseas banking contagion fears.

Similar equity sector performance was evident among the Fund s convertible positions. In addition to Telecommunications and Health Care, Information Technology and Utilities issues were among the strongest performers. Select technology companies were higher on M&A activity as well as data suggesting continued strong end-market demand. Utilities companies rallied as investors rotated into less volatile, defensive issues.

The Fund s weakest convertible performers were concentrated in cyclical sectors including Energy, Transportation, Materials and Industrials. Industrial issuers were lower despite reporting positive quarterly profits and citing strong end demand. In general, Transportation companies underperformed due to economic slowdown concerns.

(1) Past performance is no guarantee of future results. Total return is calculated by determining the percentage change in NAV or market price (as applicable) in the specified period. The calculation assumes that all income dividends, capital gain and return of capital distributions, if any, have been reinvested. Total return does not reflect broker commissions or sales charges in connection with the purchase or sale of Fund shares. Total return for a period of more than one year represents the average annual total return.

Performance at market price will differ from results at NAV. Although market price returns typically reflect investment results over time, during shorter periods returns at market price can also be influenced by factors such as changing views about each Fund, market conditions, supply and demand for the Fund s shares, or changes in each Fund s dividends.

An investment in each Fund involves risk, including the loss of principal. Total return, market price, market price yield and NAV will fluctuate with changes in market conditions. This data is provided for information purposes only and is not intended for trading purposes. Closed-end funds, unlike open-end funds, are not continuously offered. There is a onetime public offering and once issued, shares of closed-end funds are traded in the open market through a stock exchange. NAV is equal to total assets less liabilities divided by the number of shares outstanding. Holdings are subject to change daily.

(2) Market Price Yield is determined by dividing the annualized current quarterly per share dividend (comprised of net investment income and net capital gains, if any) payable to shareholders by the market price per share at January 31, 2012.
