Pearson TRADING STATEMENT

Full-year guidance raised: headline earnings growth expected to be around 10%

Worldwide position in digital and services businesses delivers growth and market share gains

Pearson is today providing its regular January trading update ahead of announcing preliminary results for 2009 on 1 March 2010.

Despite the very tough macroeconomic environment, Pearson performed well in 2009. Throughout the year, we have benefited from strong growth in US higher education; good profit improvement in US school testing and international education; and the resilience of professional testing and our subscription-based businesses in the FT Group. Our headline results were also helped by the strength of the US dollar against sterling*. In addition, in the fourth quarter we began to see the first signs of trading conditions easing in certain markets that were challenging earlier in the year: the rate of decline in advertising revenues began to slow; Penguin had a strong holiday season; and we saw a modest improvement in the US School publishing market.

As a result, we now expect to report headline growth in adjusted earnings per share of around 10% (against adjusted EPS of 57.7p in 2008), ahead of our previous guidance and the current consensus of market expectations (approximately 61p, according to Reuters and Bloomberg).

Marjorie Scardino, chief executive, said: "Last year provided a harsh test of our strategy and grit and our people rose to the challenge. We're heartened by our performance in the face of the economic downturn, and emboldened by the accelerating worldwide take-up of our brand of personal and digital learning. We are not counting on any help from the global economy this year, but we still see significant long-term growth opportunities and we are pressing ahead with this successful strategy."

In North American education, pressures on state budgets resulted in a weak year for the school publishing industry, in line with our expectations. However, our school publishing business gained share and our overall North American education company performed ahead of our expectations. We are particularly encouraged by our growth in higher education, assessment and digital learning.

Our international education business will report another year of good underlying profit growth. As in North America, some schools markets around the world have faced a weak funding environment, but our higher education and testing businesses have remained robust and we continue to grow strongly in many developing markets. We also continue to see rapid growth in digital learning across our businesses.

The Financial Times Group ended the year ahead of our expectations. In FT Publishing, our subscription-based revenues remained resilient and the tough market conditions for advertising revenues began to show some signs of easing in the fourth quarter. Interactive Data will report its fourth-quarter performance and full-year results on 23 February.

Penguin performed well in its key trading season, sustaining its improved sales momentum in the fourth quarter. We continue to see strong growth in digital book formats and innovation with new digital readers, particularly in the United States.

For the full year, we continue to expect our interest charge to be higher than in 2008 and we now expect our effective tax rate to be around the low end of our previous guidance of 26-28%.

*Pearson generates approximately 60% of its sales in US dollars. The average £:$ exchange rate for 2009 was £1: $1.57, against £1: $1.85 for 2008. The closing rate at the year end was £1: $1.61.
