PART III

NARRATIVE

State below in reasonable detail why Forms 10-K, 20-F, 11-K, 10-Q, N-SAR, N-CSR, or the transition report or portion thereof, could not be filed within the prescribed time period.

On July 13, 2004, the Registrant announced its intention to restate its audited financial results for the fiscal years ended February 29, 2004, February 28, 2003, and February 28, 2002, and its unaudited financial statements for the fiscal quarter ended May 31, 2004. The restatement is due entirely to the correction in the Registrant's method of recognizing revenue for subscription agreements. Due to the Registrant's recent efforts in connection with the announced restatement, the Registrant is unable to timely file its Form 10-Q for the fiscal quarter ended May 31, 2004 without unreasonable effort or expense. The Registrant currently anticipates filing its Form 10-Q for the quarter ended May 31, 2004 on or before July 19, 2004.

Yes No

Yes No

If so: attach an explanation of the anticipated change, both narratively and quantitatively, and, if appropriate, state the reasons why a reasonable estimate of the results cannot be made.

On July 13, 2004 the Registrant announced that it has corrected the manner in which it recognizes revenues for certain of its subscription agreements and, as a result, will restate its audited financial statements for the fiscal years ended February 29, 2004, February 28, 2003, and February 28, 2002, and its unaudited financial statements for the fiscal quarter ended May 31, 2004.

Edgar Filing: RED HAT INC - Form NT 10-Q

The decision results from recent discussions between the Registrant and the Registrant's independent auditors following the normal rotation of audit partners required by the accounting profession's rotation rules. As a result of these discussions, the Registrant determined it would be appropriate to stop recognizing revenue for subscription agreements on a monthly basis - a method it has consistently applied for the last five years - and start recognizing revenue on a daily basis over the particular contract term.

The Registrant's announced restatement is due entirely to a correction in the Registrant's method of recognizing revenue for subscription agreements. The effect of using the new method is to defer a portion of the revenue that had been previously recognized in the month of commencement of a subscription to the month in which the subscription ends.

This correction in method has no effect on the amount of revenues that the Registrant will ultimately recognize from the subscriptions to the Registrant's Red Hat Enterprise Linux product that the Registrant has sold over the last 24 months, nor does it affect the sequential quarterly growth in the number of subscriptions sold over the last two fiscal years or the increase in operating cash flows that has resulted from the increase in the number of new subscriptions sold over this period.

While the new accounting method is not expected to materially affect annual revenues and will not affect operating cash flows or the number of new subscriptions for any quarterly period, it is expected to result in a significant percentage differences in certain items such as quarterly operating profit and net income. The following is a summary of the estimated range of effects of the accounting change on the Registrant's annual and quarterly historical results:

Note: As a result of the above restatements, the Registrant's accumulated deficit at each balance sheet date is expected to increase by an amount equal to the cumulative change in net income (loss). The Registrant's deferred revenue is expected to increase by an amount equal to the revenues which are being deferred. Certain other balance sheet accounts such as inventory and other assets are also expected to be affected.

The Registrant recognized revenues, prior to the correction, using a method that resulted in revenue recognition as if the subscription commenced on the first day of the month in which the subscription was sold. For example, the Registrant would have recognized one-twelfth of the revenue of a twelve-month subscription in the calendar month during which the subscription commenced, and the remaining subscription revenue over the next eleven calendar months.

On June 16, 2004, the Registrant's independent auditors informed the Registrant that it should consider recognizing revenue from a subscription over the term of the subscription (for example, the number of days in the subscription period), which ultimately resulted in the Registrant deciding to change to this method. The resulting change in method will now mean that the Registrant will begin to recognize revenue on the date of commencement of a subscription and ratably over the remaining term of the subscription. The effect of the Registrant's decision is to defer a portion of the subscription revenues that would have been recognized in the month of the commencement of the subscription to the last month of the subscription term.

The Registrant is currently not aware of any other adjustments that will be required to its historical financial statements in addition to those reflected in the estimates above. It is possible, however, that other items may be identified in the process of restating the Registrant's financial

Although the Registrant does not anticipate that the review by the Staff will result in any material changes to previously reported financial results, the Registrant cannot provide assurances that such changes will not be required.
