Good morning. I have some great news to share about the future of The St. Paul Companies. We are announcing the merger of The St. Paul and Travelers to create the second largest commercial insurer and a leading provider of property-casualty insurance distributed through independent agents and brokers. This combined company will be headquartered in Saint Paul and will be called The St. Paul Travelers Companies. It will remain a Minnesota corporation.

Over the course of the past two years, we have worked very hard to refocus our company. We have exited underperforming businesses, we have established a performance-based culture, and we have focused on enhancing our position with our trading partners. All of this effort positions our company to take the next important step in its growth.

Separately, The St. Paul and Travelers are two very good companies. Together, we will be one great company.

I know you have many questions about this transaction, many of which we will not be able to answer for several weeks. However, we are eager to share with you the details we have, so we have scheduled an all-employee meeting for tomorrow afternoon at 3 p.m. Central time. The meeting will be broadcast via SPC TV from the Jackson Room of Corporate Headquarters. I invite you all to participate.
