[The following message was sent to customers of SCM Microsystems on December 11, 2008 by Felix Marx, CEO of SCM Microsystems]

To our Customers and Partners:

I d like to share with you an exciting development for SCM Microsystems.

We have reached a definitive agreement to merge with Hirsch Electronics Corporation, a leading supplier of physical access control systems.

Combining SCM and Hirsch would transform our two companies into a security industry powerhouse in the physical and logical access control market. Our customers would benefit from the merged company s strengths in all areas:

- Ø Expanded breadth of our solution range;
- Ø New, integrated products and technology to address evolving physical and logical security requirements;
- Ø Expanded market presence and local resources in all key regions;
- Ø Increased operational scale and financial solidity;
- Ø A shared commitment to the customer and a clear focus on innovation, reliability and company integrity.

This move comes because we, and the management of Hirsch, are listening to you.

Many of our customers worldwide are calling for converged solutions to information security and physical access control. That trend is creating demand for a broad set of devices, from doors to desktops, with support for smart cards, biometrics and contactless technologies. By offering both of our respective product lines, we can better address the full spectrum of your requirements, something that will make the new SCM an even more valuable partner to you.

We anticipate the merger will close in the first half of 2009. In the meantime, as shareholders and regulators review the merger details, SCM customers can expect business as usual.

SCM s employees and management team will continue doing what we have always done putting our customers satisfaction first with well designed, high performance technology, on-time deliveries and excellent quality. After the proposed merger is completed, these core values essential to your satisfaction and our growth will be completely ingrained in the new, combined company. Please refer to our joint press release [LINK TO PRESS RELEASE] announcing the proposed merger for further details. Sincerely,

Felix Marx
