On May 7, 2015, Hecla Mining Company held its first quarter 2015 financial results conference call. In that call, Hecla included the following statements regarding its previously announced proposed acquisition of Revett Mining Company, Inc.:

THE FOLLOWING IS A TRANSCRIPT OF A PORTION OF HECLA'S FIRST QUARTER 2015 FINANCIAL RESULTS CONFERENCE CALL WHICH TOOK PLACE ON MAY 7, 2015, AND WHICH IS POSTED ON HECLA'S WEBSITE.

Phillips S. Baker, Jr., Hecla's President and Chief Executive Officer made the following statements:

"Our significant growth potential is why we have no plans to throttle our business back. The advancement that we've made this quarter at San Sebastian and the potential acquisition of Revett now gives us a growth pipeline that should provide us growth over the short, medium, and long terms."

"And then, in the longer-term, we have the potential acquisition of Revett and its Rock Creek project, which is expected to close later in the second quarter. This has the potential to add substantial silver production. This a long-term project that could take 10 to 15 years or longer to get to production and requires substantial permitting efforts, but we think we're up to the task, given our excellent long-term operating record at Greens Creek, which is in a national monument, the fact that Rock creek is in our backyard; as well as our financial and technical expertise."

...

“And we now have the strongest growth pipeline we’ve had in years. We expect near-term silver growth from San Sabastian, growth in the midterm from the Lucky Friday, and potential growth in the long term upon closing the Revett acquisition.”

...

A listener asked the following question:

“And then moving on to Revett, how do you see that developing the permitting process? The permitting process there would probably be quite extended. What sort of hoops do you have to jump through, and do you see any sort of contentious issues?”

Mr. Baker gave the following response:

“I guess the first thing I would say is that the Revett team, I think, has done a very good job of advancing the permitting and dealing with the community. They built great relationships with the folks in the community. And there’s actually a significant amount of support for the project in the local community. And we will just be continuing the process that they’ve begun. They actually got their decision to be able to take this forward in 2009, and then it was subject to lawsuits. And so there has been revisions that they have made as a result of the lawsuits. And that should be – the final supplemental EIS should be coming out sometime within the next year or so. We are anticipating that there will be additional permitting that we will need to do and additional work. And we are prepared to do those things. We think with the experience that we have in Juneau at Admiralty Island, with the bear population there, it’s analogous to what needs to be done at Rock Creek. And so we think we will be able to show the ability to properly manage things and be able to build even more support than Revett has had. Having said that, we think it’s going to be a long process. So we’re not envisioning this being a producing asset for the better part of 10 to 15 years. But we do think we will make steady progress on it.”
